NEEDED 701

More Votes Than It Received to Bring Success to the

REFUNDING LOAN ORDINANCE.

Saturday's Election Passed off Quietly. Only one "Scrap" Interfering With the Serenity of the Occasion—The Partisan Fight Made by the Democrats Defeated the Refund—A Small Vote was Out-The Result in Detail.

The refunding loan ordinance special election occurred Saturday and resulted in the defeat of the ordinance by a majority of 589, and 701 less than the required three-fifths of the votes cast, which numbered 3,383, a very small vote, not one-half of the number usually cast at municipal elections.

Now that the election has passed and the ordinance is defeated, some of its staunchest supporters admit that they saw defeat in the air several days before. While the Democratic organ was engaged in making a partisan issue of a purely business proposition and the party's workers were taking up the cue, the Republican organization declined to champion the ordinance and make the special election a test of party strength. To the natural opposition to the refund, made up of both Republicans and Democrats, was added the Democratic vote that is controlled on all occasions by the party workers—men who do not vote unless they are brought to the polls by the workers. On the other hand, the ordinance stood on its merits alone, and the Republican organization took no part in the contest. Even in the face of defeat for the refund, it is believed by many that three-fifths of the voters of the city favor this method of arranging the city's finances. The trouble was that the refund's strength didn't materialize at the polls. This is shown in the small vote that was cast, 3,383, less than one-half of the vote usual at municipal elections.

One of the arguments used by the workers against the refund—all of them, almost without exception, Democrats—was that if the refund was beaten, the Democrats would be assured a victory at the next regular city election. This was sufficient to bring out votes for the ordinance, not quite three-fifths, the second gave the refund a majority of six votes. In the other wards the ordinance was in the minority, being snowed under in the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth, while the Third gave twenty-five majority.

The vote in detail is given in the following table:

Voting places.	Vote.	For.	Ag't.	Major.
First ward.....	429	195	234	47
Second ward.....	142	70	81	21
Third ward.....	409	213	196	27
Fourth ward.....	552	253	299	6
Fifth ward.....	455	219	234	25
Sixth ward.....	512	185	327	242
Seventh ward.....	573	118	252	134
Eighth ward.....	609	196	409	207
Ninth ward.....	555	192	363	31
Tenth ward.....	217	125	83	40
Total.....	572	321	250	71
Grand total.....	589	140	449	6
Grand total.....	165	80	85	5
Total.....	451	230	221	11
Grand total.....	3583	1688	2278	589

The amount of money used in the hiring of workers against the ordinance, was suggestive of motives more selfish than partisan opposition to the refund. The question, where this money came from and what inspired its coming, are pertinent inquiries now going the rounds.
